Oil on canvas landscape mid 20th century

Description

A heavily textured oil on canvas. From afar this looks like a master piece but the closer you get you realise it's very heavily applied and probably using a putty knife rather than a brush. However it's done it's been done by an experienced hand and this style of painting always works so well.

There is a small hole but due to the thickness of the paint it's not showing through, there is also a lump but again it's not evidently visible due to the way the paint has been applied.
