Description

A well drawn early 19th century country house armchair. Raised on walnut legs and the original L.W. Lewty brass casters. Retaining the original horsehair innards which feel firm and intact. The horsehair squab also appears to be original. Overall the chair stands firm. There are some minor losses to the legs which will be restored by us before it leaves. The rails show evidence of historic worm which has been treated for good measure and it is only cosmetic and not structural. For upholstery and restoration. As with all our upholstered seating we do offer upholstery should you wish. 37cm seat height
